A Texas Transformation

DESIGNER OHARA DAVIES-GAETANO TURNS UP THE CHARM OF A HOUSTON HOUSE WITH STRIKING INTERIOR ARCHITECTURAL DETAILS, ANTIQUES WITH PATINA, AND A TOUCH OF CALIFORNIA STYLE.

TEXT KAREN CARROLL | PHOTOGRAPHY MICHAEL HUNTER

Previous pages: In the gallery hall, anchored with European antiques, designer Chiara Davies-Gaetano lightened the formerly dark woodwork and floors. These pages: Two David Tista chandeliers illuminate the living room. Comfortable furniture upholstered in neutral fabrics keeps the room from feeling too formal.
